Resident Spotlight

Charles Skupp

Charlie Skupp was born in Brooklyn in 1923, the fourth of five children. His parents had emigrated from Russia to escape persecution. At 19, he entered the Army where he served as an airplane mechanic in the South Pacific before being honorably discharged. After the war, he worked for his brother-in-law at his delicatessen in Jersey City. Charlie married several years later and worked as a salesman in New York before opening his own electronics and gift store in Teaneck. He developed a reputation as a "Mr. Fix-It" who could repair almost anything that was not working properly. Later, after a divorce, he retired and moved to Florida, where he spent almost 25 years with his second wife enjoying tennis, bicycling and foreign travel. He moved back to New Jersey three years ago to be close to his son and family. His relatives say they are delighted to have him living at Inglemoor.
